I ran the algorithm quite a number of times (10+), but the clusters seemed to remain in the same position. This shows that the algorithm is in fact stable, due to the fact that regardless of the centroids being chosen at random, they seem to remain stable in a single position. The algorithm can be assumed to have "converged".